Why I Give: Honoring a Father's Legacy by Supporting Future Students

Businessman-entrepreneur Jack J. Kellar was introduced to engine mechanics during World War II as a crew chief for P-51 Mustang airplanes.

When he first returned from the war, Jack worked as a mechanic for Grand Garage in Santa Rosa. A few years later he became part owner of Santa Rosa Auto Parts, one of Sonoma County's longest-running partnerships. Over time the partners bought or built a number of buildings, some for their auto parts businesses. Even after retirement from Santa Rosa Auto Parts, Jack enjoyed managing the commercial properties until his passing.

In honor of their father, Jack's daughters Joanne Kellar and Judy Kellar Fox recently established an endowed scholarship to support SRJC's automotive students, especially to help in the purchase of their tools.

Learn more about the newspaper clipping he carried in his wallet and why Joanne and Judy decided to give to SRJC automotive students.

If you'd like to support the scholarship, please make a gift online and write 'Jack J. Kellar Scholarship' in the 'Please designate your gift' line.

For more information establishing your own scholarship, visit foundation.santarosa.edu or contact Executive Director Kate McClintock at 707-527-4797 or kmcclintock@santarosa.edu.

SRJC Receives Community Grant from Impact 100

Representatives from the SRJC Foundation and SRJC High School Equivalency Program (HEP) were honored to receive a "community grant" from Impact 100 Redwood Circle members on Friday, December 16th for $5,000.

The HEP Program helps migrant and seasonal agricultural workers and their immediate family members achieve a High School Equivalency Certificate and also broadens students' perspective of education and exposes them to vocational and technical careers at SRJC and the possibility of transferring to a four year university. HEP provides academic support such as preparation classes, personalized tutoring, and transportation, testing fees, books and supplies assistance. HEP also offers transitional services such as career exploration, financial literacy, resume writing, scholarship assistance, informational workshops and exposure to cultural events. The population served by this program is marginalized, disadvantaged and most in need of support and guidance.

The Impact 100 Redwood Circle funds will be used to support students beginning their first semester of college at SRJC with book and parking vouchers.

Impact 100 is a Sonoma County women's giving circle which empowers and enables local women to serve as philanthropic leaders by collectively funding significant grants that will make a lasting impact in our community.

Thank you Impact 100 for making a difference in the lives of HEP students and their families.

SRJC Aims To Be Model of Sustainability, Thanks to Measure H Support

Sustainability is one of the eight core objectives of SRJC's master building plan which was developed to support SRJC's implementation of Measure H funding.

The goal for SRJC is to make the Santa Rosa campus achieve zero net energy by the 2030 state mandate, meaning the college makes as much energy as it uses.
